

Talk about roots

You'd have to call University Physician Richard Burns, MD, a true son of Columbia and the University of Missouri.

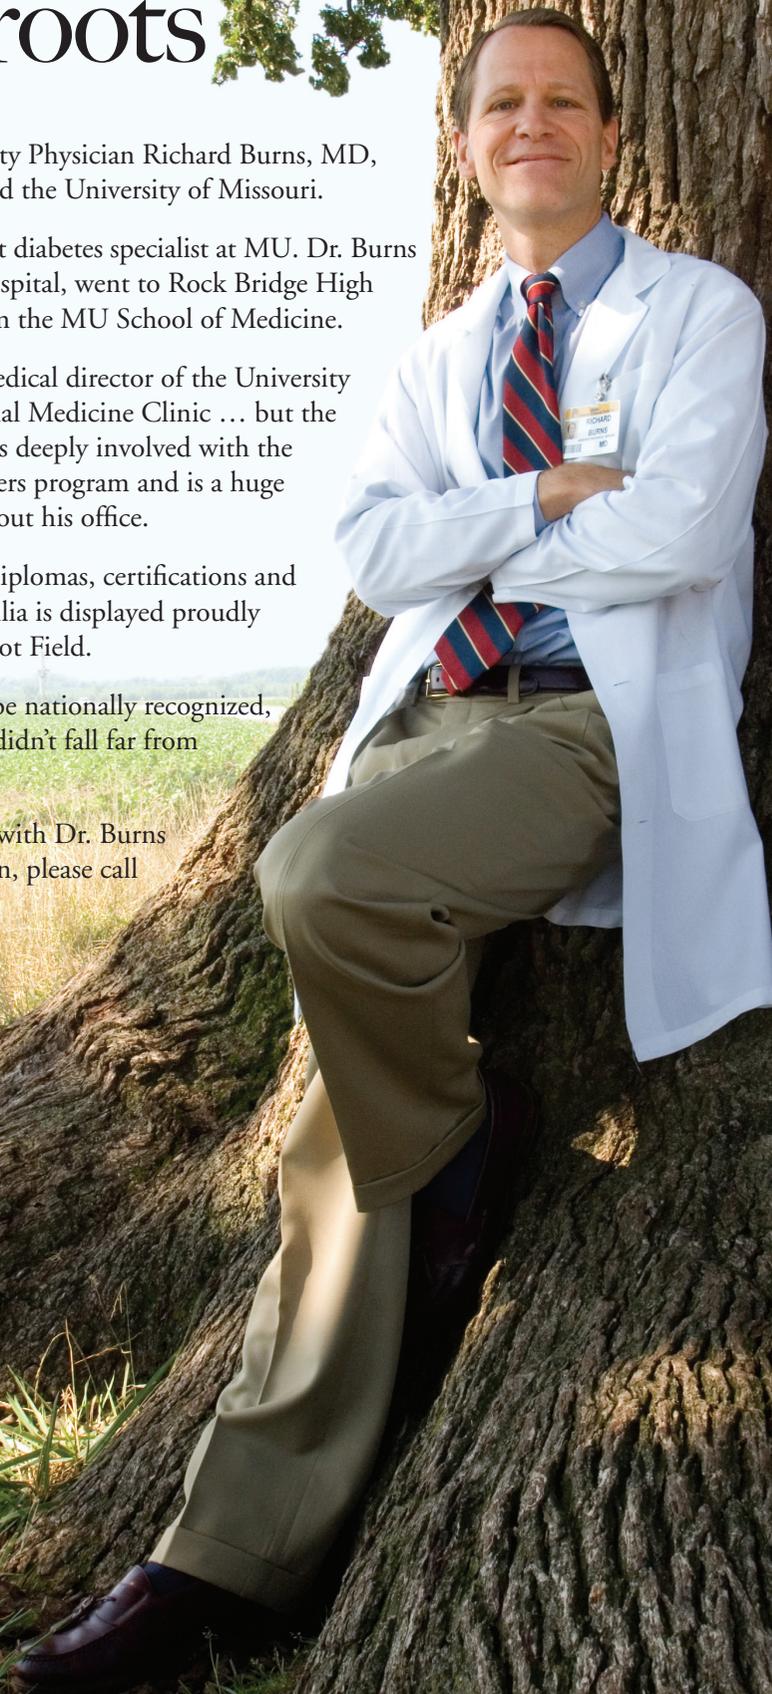

His father was a prominent diabetes specialist at MU. Dr. Burns was born at University Hospital, went to Rock Bridge High School and graduated from the MU School of Medicine.

Today, Dr. Burns is the medical director of the University Physicians-Fairview Internal Medicine Clinic ... but the roots are still growing. He's deeply involved with the local Big Brothers Big Sisters program and is a huge MU Tiger fan. Just check out his office.

Along with a wall-full of diplomas, certifications and awards, Mizzou memorabilia is displayed proudly including a replica of Faurot Field.

Although Dr. Burns may be nationally recognized, it's easy to see this doctor didn't fall far from the tree.
